POST A SECRET

Have you got a secret that you have never shared with anyone? Thanks to a popular website called PostSecret, you can now get your secret off your chest without actually risking anything. All you have to do is write your secret on one side of a self-made postcard and go to the nearest post office to send it. You remain anonymous. If your postcard appeals to Frank Warren, the creator of the website, he will post it on his blog, where it will be read by millions of visitors.

The secrets on PostSecret are extremely varied. Some are funny, many are sad and some are philosophical. One postcard said: "I still haven't told my father that I have the same disease that killed my mother." Some secrets are sent on objects other than postcards. For example, Warren received one secret printed on a cup from the popular coffeehouse chain, Starbucks. It read: "When customers are rude to me, I give them decaffeinated coffee."

The PostSecret project started in 2004 when Warren was preparing an art exhibition. He decided to print out postcards inviting strangers to submit a true secret that they had never shared with anyone. Initially, he received about 100 postcards, which he then used to form his exhibition. To Warren's surprise, the postcards kept coming long after the exhibition was over. In 2007, Warren began posting some of the most creative and interesting submissions on his blog

Today, PostSecret is one of the most popular blogs in the world, with an estimated 2.3 million visitors a month. Warren gets an average of 200 postcards a day, and to date, he has received more than 100,000 cards.

The site does not directly generate profit since it does not allow advertisements. However, Warren is making money from books that he has published and from travelling art exhibitions which include selections of the best postcards he has received. As more and more postcards continue to arrive at his family home, it seems that Warren certainly holds the key to one important secret: the secret of success.
